

President Biden, Support a People's Vaccine

By Helen Clark, Gordon Brown, Richard Roberts

Over the past year, the world witnessed unprecedentedly rapid development of safe and effective vaccines, largely owing to US public investment. And now it is crucial to American national interest to push up global vaccination efforts by supporting a number of industrial property rights.

For President Biden, the underdog former heads of state and government and Nobel laureates, are greatly concerned by the slow progress in rolling out global COVID-19 vaccine access and inoculation to low- and middle-income countries.

Over the past year, the world witnessed unprecedentedly rapid development of safe and effective vaccines, largely owing to US public investment. We all welcome their vaccine rollout in the United States and every reasonable vaccine is being given to those citizens.

For the majority of the world, that same hope is nowhere to be seen. The vaccine rollout is slow and uneven, and the world is still in the grip of the pandemic.
